TROUBLE IN THE BALKANS.

AFFAIRS IN THE ORIENT.
Britain and Japan have sent a joint note to China urging action against Russia.

NOT IN SYMPATHY.
The people of Dublin broke up a corporation meeting assembled to arrange a program to receive King Edward.

REJOICING IN WINNIPEG.
Winnipeg citizens received with pleasure the news of the government's intention to build a line from Moncton to Winnipeg.

ON THE PEACE RIVER
The Davies survey party returned from the far north the first of the week. F. W. C. Davies, C.E., was in charge of the party. Under him was H. Smith, P. L. S., of Rossland, B. C. The party left Edmonton on February 27th, being absent a little over four months. Leaving Edmonton they arrived at the Peace River crossing after a trip of sixteen days. Two days more took them on to Dunvegan. From Dunvegan the party traveled to St. Johns on the Peace River in British Columbia, in fifteen days. Leaving St. Johns they went on as far as Hudson's Hope, beyond the canyon of the Peace, where this river rushes through a spur of the Rockies. The canyon is twenty-three miles long. On their homeward trip the party took raft on the canyon and traveled fourteen miles guided by a Peace River Indian. The party claim to be the first whites to descend through such a large portion of the canyon during high water. They made the fourteen miles in one hour and fifteen minutes and had very novel experiences. In one place the raft trapped over a shelving of rock and scooped a large wave of water over the occupants of the raft thoroughly drenching them. They came back as far as Peace River crossing by raft. At this point they took Bredin and Cornwall's steamer to Athabasca Landing, returning to Edmonton from there. The party would not speak of their mission to the north. They were greatly pleased with the Peace River country. There is a very luxuriant growth of grass and the whole district seems to be of great agricultural value. There was only four days of rain in the four months that the party were in the north. Messrs. Davies and Smith have left for their homes in Ontario and British Columbia.

ALBERTA

The following excellent letter appears in a recent issue of an American publication:

"As there is considerable interest taken in the Canadian Northwest I submit for your readers an accurate account of what Alberta is, what is doing there now, its people, and what settlers may look forward to; how to get their bearings towards Americans, etc.

The attractions to the provinces of Canada from the middle west and sympathetically from every state of the union, awakens an interest from the Pacific Coast states towards Alberta, the province nearest to us which contains a semblance of our climate and a vast tract of open land. To the middle westerner Alberta is a land too far west.

This province is more than a third larger than the state of Washington and it contains scarcely a foot of waste land. The climate of the southern portion is dry yet is much more moist than the Dakotas, and the surface of the land shows an ample growth of grass.

The northern portion, consisting of all that portion from a point 40 miles north of Calgary, is very moist climatically and for three years past has been too wet for crops, except on the sloping land, of which however there are large areas. This whole northern country seems to lie in a large dishy fashion, which is one of the most favorable forms possible to collect the rays of the sun and to ward off the cold or high winds. But high winds, strange to note, are a rare occurrence and any continuous winds are also unusual. The country presents to the stranger a vast expanse of almost entirely uncultivated prairie of broken surface, covered to the extent of about a third with a scattered dwarf willow, among which are often small scattering poplar trees, and again larger poplar pole tracts, the trees being the size of fence posts. There also are in scattering growth, large tracts of bushes, comprising small black birch, rose sprouts and the Saskatoon, which latter provides a berry which is very much relished by the settlers. A heavy bush area, incurs an expense of five dollars per acre to plow, but this land is a little better than the clear land. The farther north, the heavier the brush is the rule. The poplar forms, at present, the immediate source of fuel supply but coal is found cropping out of many and divers river banks and is vigorously under appropriation by nearby settlers. Some surface streams are predominant with alkali water, yet excellent well water is always found at a depth of eight to thirty feet, the usual depth being eighteen to twenty feet.

The land is a black loam and underneath at a depth of two to four feet either clay or soft rock. The clay is already being used for brick and these are of a surprisingly hard, clear quality. Already many brick buildings are going up. Besides the poplar referred to, the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains contains a large supply of moderate sized fir timber which is already being rafted down the rivers and sawn into lumber at several points on the Calgary & Edmonton railway, a distance of over 20 miles from the outskirts of the timber. The apex of the mountains is 80 miles from the line of road. Round lumber is plentiful at a cost of $15 per thousand. There are many small, portable mills, located at mean distances from the mountains, cutting spruce lumber and settlers are allowed to help themselves by paying a small royalty or fee. Timber in this way costs only the sawing, or five dollars per thousand.

The land, it may be stated, is beyond doubt, of the best quality, and the thousands of experienced prairie settlers from the Dakotas, Minnesota and other states of the west, confirm this fact. They are bringing the well recognized farm machinery, stock and families. At present there is no drawback, that is, the frost, both the winter frost and the summer frost. Experienced prairie men understand this and go ahead. Nearly all new northern countries are similarly affected, and this old complaint of the Dakotas, Minnesota and the other states disappears with land cultivation. At present, April 10th, farmers are sowing grain on land plowed last fall. The first on plowed ground is still found at a depth of a few inches, but on raw land it is found within an inch of the surface. Small strips of snow may be seen in land depressions. The soil is matted with old grass, of last year which is still green near the roots, and in the distance prairie fires may be seen at various compass points. Cattle are actually fat though they have eaten nothing but this grass all winter. Some farmers provided hay and the corral. Hay is stacked by the use of the hay sweep and stacker. There is a great abundance of hay for all so far, at a sort of hay bale, called the hay stack, which is dry in summer, produces enormous crops. There are many of these bales, and their value is par with other lands. As cattle fatten in such hay its quality must be remarkably superior. During a recent cold snap one farmer was feeding stock from the stack, and only about half of the herd left the prairie grass to come up. Hay now sells for $2.50 per ton in the stack.

The crop yield of the land is remarkable large. Sod land often produces forty bushels of oats per acre. The yield on old land has reached 120 bushels per acre. Barley is a prolific crop, and wheat yields from 20 to 40 bushels per acre. All small fruits and garden vegetables do well. There is some doubt about an apple crop, but this is to be tried for.

The winters are without much snow, ably large. Sod land often produces lowest temperature in the region of Red Deer being 28 degrees below. The air being dry the cold is not so intense as in damp climates.

All railroad lands are now advanced to $5.00 per acre, but the homestead privilege remains the same. Any person who is the head of a family may obtain a quarter section of land by a residence of 18 months and by paying a fee of $10. Residence in an adjoining township is permitted to count on the homestead if desired. A settler may also get a transfer from a poor homestead to a better one if he can find it and so desires. There are no land to be had nearer the railroad than 15 to 20 miles, unless one buys of private parties. There are often opportunities to purchase of men who made the first payment only and cannot make a second. All land sold last year was on the 10 payment plan. This year only six payments are given. A purchase from a last year man is there fore advantageous sometimes.

There are many miles of new railroad projected and hence opportunities to get near them. There are thousands of claims open and for sale but they are being taken rapidly. The great Barr colony near Prince Albert leaves certain sections open, especially for Canadians and Americans, so these colonists may be shown how. It is doubtful though, whether many will care for this opening.

There is no noticeable national animosity. The English settler is a mere speck, the Canadian comes next, and the American is most numerous. Some towns are three-fourths American and both the Canadians and English fully respect the former. The English are proud of America, and, if anything, more friendly with them than with the Canadians. The American is more the Canadian's ideal than the Englishman. American styles in manufacture suit the Canadian. English styles he will not have, and it is disappointing to see him pay any duty for his preference.

Whether it would be advisable for an American to go to Alberta or Canada this article is submitted to judge from. To an American who has no home or homestead right and wishes to secure one, here certainly is an opening. He must lose his citizenship, but he may return at a future day if he wishes. This vast tract of vacant land is about the last open to the land seeker in America. South Africa and Mexico may be the next, but Americans are more at home in Canada. Canadian institutions are essentially American: their currency the same, and our money circulates on a parity with it. Their schools and postal system, the same and their laws as free and better lived up to. Their system of land surveying is the same, except the numbering begins at the southeast corner of the township and no section is encroached upon for public road purposes. All quarter sections are full. This makes a "gorge" now and then and farms are located within gores as well as townships. All roads are 66 feet wide.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad gives a reduced fare of one cent per mile to intending settlers. Henry C. Cook of 1422 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, is authorized to issue certificates for this purpose. The cost to Edmonton from Seattle and return is $34, and less for points intermediate.
